

Hatch Medical to Broker Asset Sale of Quellent's DriPAD™ Technology

Atlanta, Georgia – Hatch Medical, L.L.C., a medical device incubator and technology brokerage firm, announced today that it has been retained by Quellent Technologies to broker the sale of a proprietary absorbent pad product line, designed for safely managing potentially infectious body and irrigation fluids. DriPADs are disposable super absorbent pads designed to solidify large volumes of biofluids in minutes and features a silver antimicrobial to control bacteria.

"We are pleased to have the expertise of Hatch Medical on our side and look forward to working with Hatch to secure a partner that recognizes the remarkable potential of the DriPAD technology," commented Craig Sundheimer, Quellent's Chief Business Officer. "The DriPAD line of products can be used in virtually every hospital department and provides healthcare professionals with a powerful tool to manage biological fluids. The pads are constructed with a super absorbent air-laid media and will literally absorb liters of fluids, and then sequester the pathogens in the pad core matrix," added Mr. Sundheimer.

"We're very excited to have partnered with the Quellent team and represent the novel DriPAD technology," commented Steve Hvozda, Principal of Hatch Medical, L.L.C. "DriPADs are applied at the source of the fluids and safely contain the biohazard immediately. Hospitals save time and money each time a DriPAD is used," added Mr. Hvozda, "there's no product available that absorbs and kills microbes like a DriPAD."

Hatch Medical is currently receiving bids for the acquisition or license of DriPAD, Quellent, LLC (<http://www.quellent.com>) and its associated assets through an exclusive agreement.

Founded in 2000, Hatch Medical is an incubator and broker of medical device technologies, assisting clients in the sale, license or distribution of valuable medical device assets.
